COMMENT OF THE DAY

Cabinet Changes

Two conclusions may be drawn from the Cabinet changes announced by Sir Winston Churchill on Sunday night. There is not going to be an early election and Sir Winston will remain at the helm of the Government at least until the elections and he may even continue to lead the party afterwards. The fact that Mr Eden has not been moved to any new post where he might be able to gain more experience in dealing with home affairs and general government business suggests that the Premier feels fully capable of carrying on, even though the young back benchers, straining for an opportunity to exhibit their talents, may dispute it. It is fairly reasonable to assume that when the time comes for Sir Winston to retire, Mr Eden will accept a post such as Lord President of the Council or Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to ensure a smooth transition to the Premiership. It is not that Mr Eden is unfamiliar with home affairs—he has an extremely good grasp of all local subjects and is as fluent a speaker on these matters as he is on foreign affairs. As Deputy Premier since 1951 it has been his duty to become acquainted with all the functions of Government so that in the event of an emergency he can immediately assume the role of leader of the party. It is, however, possibly desirable that he should have a period of grooming where, under the master's eye, he can add polish to his handling of a wide variety of Government business both in and out of the House.

The changes should remove the uncertainty that has been hanging over the parliamentary administration of the party for the last 18 months since the first rumours of Sir Winston's retirement began circulating. Lord Woolton's continued presence in the Cabinet is bound to be a big disappointment. His retirement from the parliamentary party would have made an opening for one of the many who have excellent claims to preferment. The younger MPs and the 1922 Committee may deplore the fact that the Cabinet's average age has been reduced by only two and a half years (it is now 58), that there are still many promising men excluded from ministerial duties. Yet the new list of minor posts reveals that Sir Winston has included many youthful members and that the "Overlords"—the top group of elder policy makers, wartime associates of the Premier's—have all but disappeared from the scene. Miss Florence Horsburgh's resignation from the Ministry of Education is not surprising. Education policy came under comparatively strong criticism at the recent Tory conference at Blackpool and the general feeling was that she was not pressing the job with the vigour it demanded. Particularly welcome is the appointment of Mr Anthony Nutting who has been concerned with the recent Suez negotiations as Under-Secretary of State. He rises to the position of Secretary of State at the Foreign Office replacing Mr Selwyn Lloyd who goes to Supply. Mr Nutting is Mr Eden's logical successor as Foreign Secretary. Mr Harold Macmillan who has earned fame as the vigorous Director of housing policy, building figures far beyond targets, has been appointed Minister of State for Economic Affairs and succeeds Lord Alverstone in the Defence Ministry. On the whole the changes should

Now Miners Go On Strike!

Doncaster, Oct. 18. About 2,500 miners at a colliery near here went on strike today demanding the dismissal of two men who they alleged had broken union working regulations. Later tonight about 2,000 of the men decided to stay on strike until the two men's case was investigated. They also decided to seek the support of 12 other pits in the Doncaster area.—Reuters.

Ho Chi Minh Assurance To Mr Nehru

Hanoi, Oct. 18. The Vietnamese leader, Ho Chi Minh, has assured the Indian Premier, Mr Jawaharlal Nehru, of his peaceful intentions towards Laos and Cambodia, it was announced tonight.

A joint communiqué published after the Indian Premier's departure for Peking said Ho told Nehru he was giving and would continue to give his aid to the international armistice commission for application of the Geneva accord.

He declared himself equally desirous of peacefully dealing with all outstanding problems of the nations of Indo-China can live in independence and prosper without any outside interference," the communiqué said.

The Vietnamese and Indian leaders declared themselves subscribers to the five principles elaborated by the Communist Chinese Premier, Chou En-lai, and by Mr Nehru, when Mr Chou was in India after the Geneva conference.—United Press.

H.E. Appeals For Easing Of Trade Ban

Denver, Oct. 18. The Governor of Hong Kong, Sir Alexander Grantham, appealed today for an "easing up" of the United Nations embargo on trade with Communist China.

He suggested that textile machines and other factory machinery be allowed to enter China.

"Hongkong must trade with China to live," he said. "The imposition of an embargo by the United Nations on the sale of strategic and semi-strategic goods to China and an imposition of a total embargo by the United States on trade with China have had a very serious effect on Hongkong."

"Just as it is vital to maintain Berlin against Communist Russia, so it is vital to hold Hongkong against Communist China."

Eventually Communist China must be admitted to the United Nations, he said.

"All nations should be admitted but no one should be allowed to shoot its way in Red China to bury the way in. In time this sin will be purged or it will be forgiven."—Reuters.

New Post For Han Su-yin

Singapore, Oct. 18. Mrs Elizabeth Comber, better known as Han Su-yin, author of the novel "A Many Splendoured Thing," has been appointed General Manager of the Nanjing University Press. Dr S. I. Hsiung, Dean of the faculty of arts announced today.

Dr Hsiung, who had just returned to Singapore from Britain, said the press would be an important feature of the university.

Dr Hsiung, who is the author of the well-known play "The Precious Stream," also came to Britain from the Institute of London Chambers and Colonial Law, based in the University of London.

London, Oct. 19. There were new union moves to spread the London dockers' strike to the inland port of Manchester, Hull and Southampton.

Meetings are to be held in these ports possibly today to ask dockers there to come out on strike. Efforts to spread the strike to the key north-western port of Liverpool were only partly successful. More than 5,000 of the port's registered 17,500 dockers are out. Thirty ships are idle and 12 are undermanned.

This afternoon hundreds of men streamed back to work after hearing a speech by a leader of past dock strikes.

Tonight there were more than 42,000 dockers idle in separate disputes in London and Liverpool with more than 300 vessels idle and undermanned.

The Government is understood to have prepared plans for moving about 15,000 troops into the London area to clear cargoes if there is any threat to "essential services."

While the strike position worsened during the day the Court of Inquiry held its first meeting. Its report, said Reuters, would carry great weight but it is only a fact-finding body and cannot force either side to accept its ruling. The disputes must be settled by negotiation.

The dock strikes—now entering their 20th day—have already cost the country almost £20 million sterling in lost export earnings. The dockers are refusing to accept overtime as compulsory.

Eleven more would return on Wednesday.

Earlier a stormy meeting of delegates representing London's 21,000 bus workers voted for a return to work by Wednesday morning.

Fighting broke out in angry scenes after the result of the delegates' vote had been announced.

The unofficial strike was part of a campaign for more pay and better working conditions. The drivers and conductors were also protesting against the introduction of new working schedules and more overtime.

The ban on overtime by the bus crews will be called off pending negotiations.

Eden, Dulles Flying To Paris

New Round Of Talks On Germany

Paris, Oct. 19. The American Secretary of State, Mr John Foster Dulles, will leave Washington for Paris this evening and the British Foreign Secretary will fly from London on Wednesday for a series of Foreign Ministers' meetings on German rearmament.

The first meeting would be on October 20 and would be between the representatives of the U.S.A., Britain, France and Germany. The Foreign Ministers would discuss the granting of sovereignty to the West German Republic.

On October 21, there would be a meeting of the nine nations which took part in the recent London conference and this would be followed by a meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation Council on October 22.

The West German Chancellor, Dr Konrad Adenauer, heading a 50-man delegation, is scheduled to arrive in Paris this morning.

Conversations between Dr Adenauer and the French Premier, M. Pierre Mendès-France on outstanding French-German problems, notably that of the Saar, will begin in the afternoon.

"All nations should be admitted but no one should be allowed to shoot its way in Red China to bury the way in. In time this sin will be purged or it will be forgiven."—Reuters.

Crisis Averted

Last night Dr Adenauer succeeded in overcoming a threatened Government crisis and won Cabinet approval for his strategy plans on his talk in Paris.

In a special Cabinet session he won unanimous backing for his stand in the Paris talks, particularly on the Saar dispute.

He persuaded the parties in his right-of-centre coalition Government to bury the hatchet for the time being and to postpone a showdown and possible walk-out of several ministers over inner-party differences until after the critical Paris talks and Dr Adenauer's visit to America.

After a long debate, Dr Adenauer's strategy plan was accepted by the Cabinet.

Goodbye To U.N.O. World War Risk Has Receded

Says Selwyn Lloyd

United Nations, Oct. 18.

The retiring British Minister of State, Mr Selwyn Lloyd, said tonight "international tension had decreased and the risk of World War III receded" during his four years as a delegate to the United Nations.

Mr Lloyd, named as new Minister of Supply in the British Cabinet reshuffle announced in London, plans to leave for England on Wednesday night to assume his new post.

At what he called a "valedictory press conference" he reviewed his experience as delegate to the Sixth, Seventh, Eighth and Ninth annual sessions of the U.N. General Assembly.

"There has been a change in tone from the Sixth to the Ninth Assemblies," he said.

"Although we have a few cold war items from time to time now, it is my feeling that they are put in for certain people to keep their hands in."

"The feeling of acute tension at the Sixth Assembly in Paris (in 1951) is now much less pronounced...despite the situation on the coast of China, things appear more settled...international tension has been reduced and the risk of World War III has receded."

The lessening of tension, Mr Lloyd said, has extended to the current debate on disarmament in the General Assembly's Main Political Committee.

TO SMALLER BODY

"But I feel that in the present debate we have got about as far as possible in a public debate...We look now for a fairly speedy remission of the matter to a smaller body for detailed discussion."

"I am not depressed about this debate. I feel it has been a useful discussion. It has been constructive because the ground was prepared for it in the London meetings (of a five-Power disarmament commission) this summer. The positions of the two sides were crystallised there."

"Since the end of the London meeting, the Soviet Union has changed its position. We must explore this fully. We must do so privately with determination on the part of all of us to reach agreement."

Mr Lloyd added that it was still "not at all clear" to him to what extent Russia had accepted the Anglo-French compromise formula put forward at the London disarmament meetings.—United Press.

Communism At The North Pole

London, Oct. 18.

Radio reported tonight that one of the floating Soviet research stations in the Arctic had reached the North Pole and had set up the "First Pole and had set up the "First Communist Party organisation in the North Pole region."

The scientists were asked to notify the Party Bureau of the Soviet Arctic Research Institute what political literature they needed to continue their studies of Marxism and Leninism at the Pole.—China Mail Special.

ALL SETTLED

The Minister of National Guidance, Major Salih Salem said last night: "All difficulties have been settled and only the physical work of translating the agreement, proper remains to be done."

"I hoped to get into the first three," he said, "but first was more than I expected. I am going out on the town for the next few days before making plans."—United Press.

Flares Up In Johore: Four Killed In Big Red Raid

Singapore, Oct. 19.

A group of Communist terrorists estimated between 60 and 80 overpowered a police post after killing four and wounding seven constables in a battle on a lonely plantation near Pontian in Johore State on Monday morning.

A police spokesman said last night at Pontian the terrorists crept up on the police post in the early hours of the morning but were spotted by one of the two sentries who shouted a challenge and opened fire. The terrorists replied with blaring automobile weapons hitting one sentry in the head and in the hip. The other sentry fired his rifle until his ammunition ran out and escaped.

Under covering fire the terrorists took the wire fence around the police post and charged into it with their rifles. They were repelled by the sentries and retreated.

At the wounded and dead were collected in security posts around the area and the police were summoned to the scene.

The police spokesman described the attack as one of the worst incidents in the colony in recent months. The raiders had been armed with rifles, shotguns and hand grenades.

India Suspicious Of U.S. Asian Policy, Says Nehru

New York, Oct. 18. Indian Premier Jawaharlal Nehru, in an interview published by the American magazine "Look," today, said that the United States had lost a great deal of respect in Asia by her appeal to reactionary forces and those of colonialism.

He admitted that Indians were unduly suspicious of American policy. This, said Mr Nehru, was "because you have become identified with colonialism, by backing the French in Indo-China, and with reaction, by supporting discredited and unpopular figures like Chiang Kai-shek, Syngman Rhee and Bao Dai. You might call it guilty by association," he added.

The West's greatest error, said Mr Nehru, had been "under-estimating Asia's nationalistic aspirations."

INDO-CHINA

He cited France and Indo-China as example and said that France could have arrived at a better agreement many years ago.

He said that the French had, in Indo-China, "continued to fight a hopeless, unpopular colonial war with the aid of American money and equipment."

M. Nehru criticized America for refusing to recognize Communist China.

"Apart from liking, or not liking, its present government," he said, "how can you ignore its existence. Not recognizing China may well aggravate your problems in Asia for it makes communications almost impossible." —France-Press.

IN HANKOW

London, Oct. 18. Mr Nehru, the Indian Prime Minister, arrived in Hankow today for an overnight stop on his flight to Peking to discuss world affairs with the Communist Chinese Premier, Mr Chou En-lai.

His arrival in Hankow from Canton, reported by Peking radio tonight brought him within 600 miles of his destination. His visit to China is for 12 days.

Arrangements are being made for him to watch a mass rally, address a public meeting, give a banquet and attend five other banquets, including one by the Prime Minister and one by the head of state, Mr Mao Tse-tung.

BUS STRIKE

Parliament will hear also a statement by Sir Walter Monckton, Labour Minister, on the London bus strike which has partially immobilized the capital for six days and which tonight appeared nearing its end.

The Minister of Labour will also report the latest developments in the London dock strike.

Politicians will return to Parliament to find the buildings renovated and Sir Winston Churchill's Government itself wearing a decidedly new look.

The Prime Minister's eve of session reshuffle, involving 24 ministerial changes has transformed the Government front-bench on the House of Commons.

Parliamentary rankers will be confronted by a ministerial array including familiar figures in unaccustomed roles as well as complete newcomers to the Government.

There will be such apparent contradictions as housing pronouncements by the Minister who, hitherto, has dealt with guided missiles and atomic warheads and defence statements by the acknowledged housing expert.

DUNCAN SANDYS

This is because Mr Duncan Sandys, Supply Minister and son-in-law of Sir Winston Churchill, has been given the Housing Portfolio while Mr Harold Macmillan, Housing Minister, has succeeded Earl Alexander as Defence "overlord" supervising the three Services Departments.

Government supporters are hoping that Sir Winston Churchill—80 next month—will appear tomorrow among his "new boys." —Reuter.

West German Monorail System

Bonn, Oct. 18. West Germany may have next year the first railway system with trains capable of about 200 miles per hour running on single overhead rails.

The monorail system has been developed by a Swedish industrialist, Mr Axel Wenner-Gren, who had talks today with the West German Federal Chancellor, Dr Konrad Adenauer, and the Economics Minister, Professor Ludwig Erhard.

Mr Wenner-Gren, a member of the Swedish royal family, is chairman of the Ericsson telephone company.

He has proposed to build a

London, Oct. 18. Mr Anthony Eden, the Foreign Secretary, will make a statement on the recent London nine-power conference when Parliament reassembles tomorrow after its long summer vacation.

He will tell the House of Commons frankly that the present prospect of solving the problem of rearming West Germany hinges on his pledge to the London talks that Britain would keep four divisions and a tactical air force on the Continent.

He will describe the measure of success on the German rearmament and Western defense issues achieved at the conference. But he is expected to warn that the agreements remain conditional on Franco-German agreement on the Saar — on which top level talks open tomorrow in Paris.

Ex-Communist Leader's Son Flees To West

Berlin, Oct. 18. Robert Dahlem, 32-year-old son of a former East German Communist leader, has fled to West Berlin because he feared arrest and could not get a job in the Soviet Zone, the anti-Communist Information Bureau West said today.

His father, Franz Dahlem, was fired from the East German Communist Party's Politburo and Central Committee last year on the grounds that he had links with Rudolf Slansky and other Czech Communist leaders executed in Prague in 1952 for an alleged anti-Soviet, pro-Zionist conspiracy. The father is now living in obscurity in East Germany.

Young Dahlem said he was arrested and held for several weeks last year on charges that he took part in the June 17 revolt. He said after his release from gaol, no one would hire him and he feared he would be arrested again. —United Press.

SAAR FEUD NO BARRIER

France & Germany Ready To Grant Mutual Concessions

ENVOYS OPTIMISTIC ON EVE OF TALKS

Paris, Oct. 18.

France and Germany will not allow their ancient Saar feud to block overall European defence plans and are now ready to grant mutual concessions, officials indicated today.

Diplomats of both sides took this optimistic line on the eve of the opening of a momentous series of conferences here to promote German rearmament through membership in NATO and a new seven-nation "West European Union" based on the 1948 Brussels Pact.

What the French Press baptised as a "cascade of conferences" opens tomorrow afternoon with a tête-à-tête between Premier Pierre Mendès-France and Federal Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

Upon their decisions concerning the Saar, it was underlined here, depends the success or failure of the whole defence structure painfully rebuilt after the European Army plan faded.

PACKET OF ACCORDS
This was because M. Mendès-France demanded an acceptable—to France—Saar settlement be included in the "packet" of accords laid down at the London Conference and now to be formalised here for parliamentary ratification before December.

Major concessions of both sides over the future status of the Saarland, a German-speaking but French-controlled border territory, were the following:

France finally agreed to agreeing that the Saar settlement may be legally provisional and temporary until a final German peace treaty is signed, provided that political and economic plans are made definitive.

France previously had wanted a final solution, perhaps fearing Germany would only get stronger and be harder to negotiate with later on. However, German sources pointed out that M. Mendès-France signed in London a tripartite U.S.-U.K.-French declaration saying Germany's boundaries would be "determined finally" only by a peace treaty.

Dr Adenauer will not fail to use this argument if the French show signs of balking.

ALMOST BARRED
Over the weekend, M. Mendès-France also hinted that Germany might be left in the rich Saar economy for trading where hitherto it has been almost barred.

A little-noted phrase in his Saturday speech at Marseilles spoke of the Saar as a territory where "the two French and German economies can work together."

Dr Adenauer is now ready to accept, according to Bonn diplomats, that the French maintain their economic, customs and monetary union with the Saar.

This major new concession depends, however, on clear understanding that Germany be permitted gradual equality in the region over a period of years.

The Bonn Chancellor also demands extension of the Council of Europe's human rights accord to the Saarland, meaning freedom of vote for the now-pro-German political parties.

He is keeping an open mind over whether the tiny pocket should be attached for supervision to the Brussels Treaty group, the Council of Europe, or the Coal-Steel Pool.

The French advocate the first alternative.

GERMAN VIEW

West Germany's greatest possible concession to France over the Saar would be the recognition of that present Franco-Saar Economic Union.

Dr Kiel Mommer, a leading member of the Social Democratic Party said here today:

Dr Mommer in an interview over the Nor-Wes. German radio said there were two basic points on which Germany must insist in any Saar solution:

1. A solution now must not prejudice final settlement in a peace treaty with a reunified Germany.

2. The West which demanded free elections from the Saar must be prepared to hold such free elections itself in the Saar (some pro-German parties are now banned).

Dr Mommer said the Saar's economy was not gaining anything from the present tie with France. The wishes of the Saar population must be respected in any temporary solution.

MAIN DIFFERENCES

Dr Mommer said the main differences between his own Saar proposals and the "Europeanisation" proposals of Dutch Socialist Marinus van der Goot van Naters were that in his proposals:

1. No final solution was sought, only a temporary one.

2. The West should concede free Saar elections.

3. West Germany made no economic demands at all.

4. The solution was being attempted as between Germany and France and not as an illusory "Europeanisation."

5. The role of the present French High Commissioner would not be taken over by a European body but by a German-French Commission with a neutral chairman—United Press and Reuter.

Mr. Potter Dreams Of Empire Showplace

London, Oct. 18.
A chain of Commonwealth trade and cultural centres, with headquarters in London, that is the dream of Sir Arnold M. Cartleton Patter of Scott Woodford, a New Zealander who emigrated to the country in 1932.

After a year of search, interrupted by the war, Mr. Patter says he has found the ideal site for the building of the London centre, the first in the chain. It is in Central London.

Mr. Patter is applying for the site and submitting plans for British House, London.

COST IS £1,600,000

He said: "The cost of the building has been put at £1,600,000, and I have got the financial backing for it in the City."

The building is designed to harmonise with those near by.

The centre would be a showplace for British goods, a meeting-ground for buyers, salesmen and manufacturers.

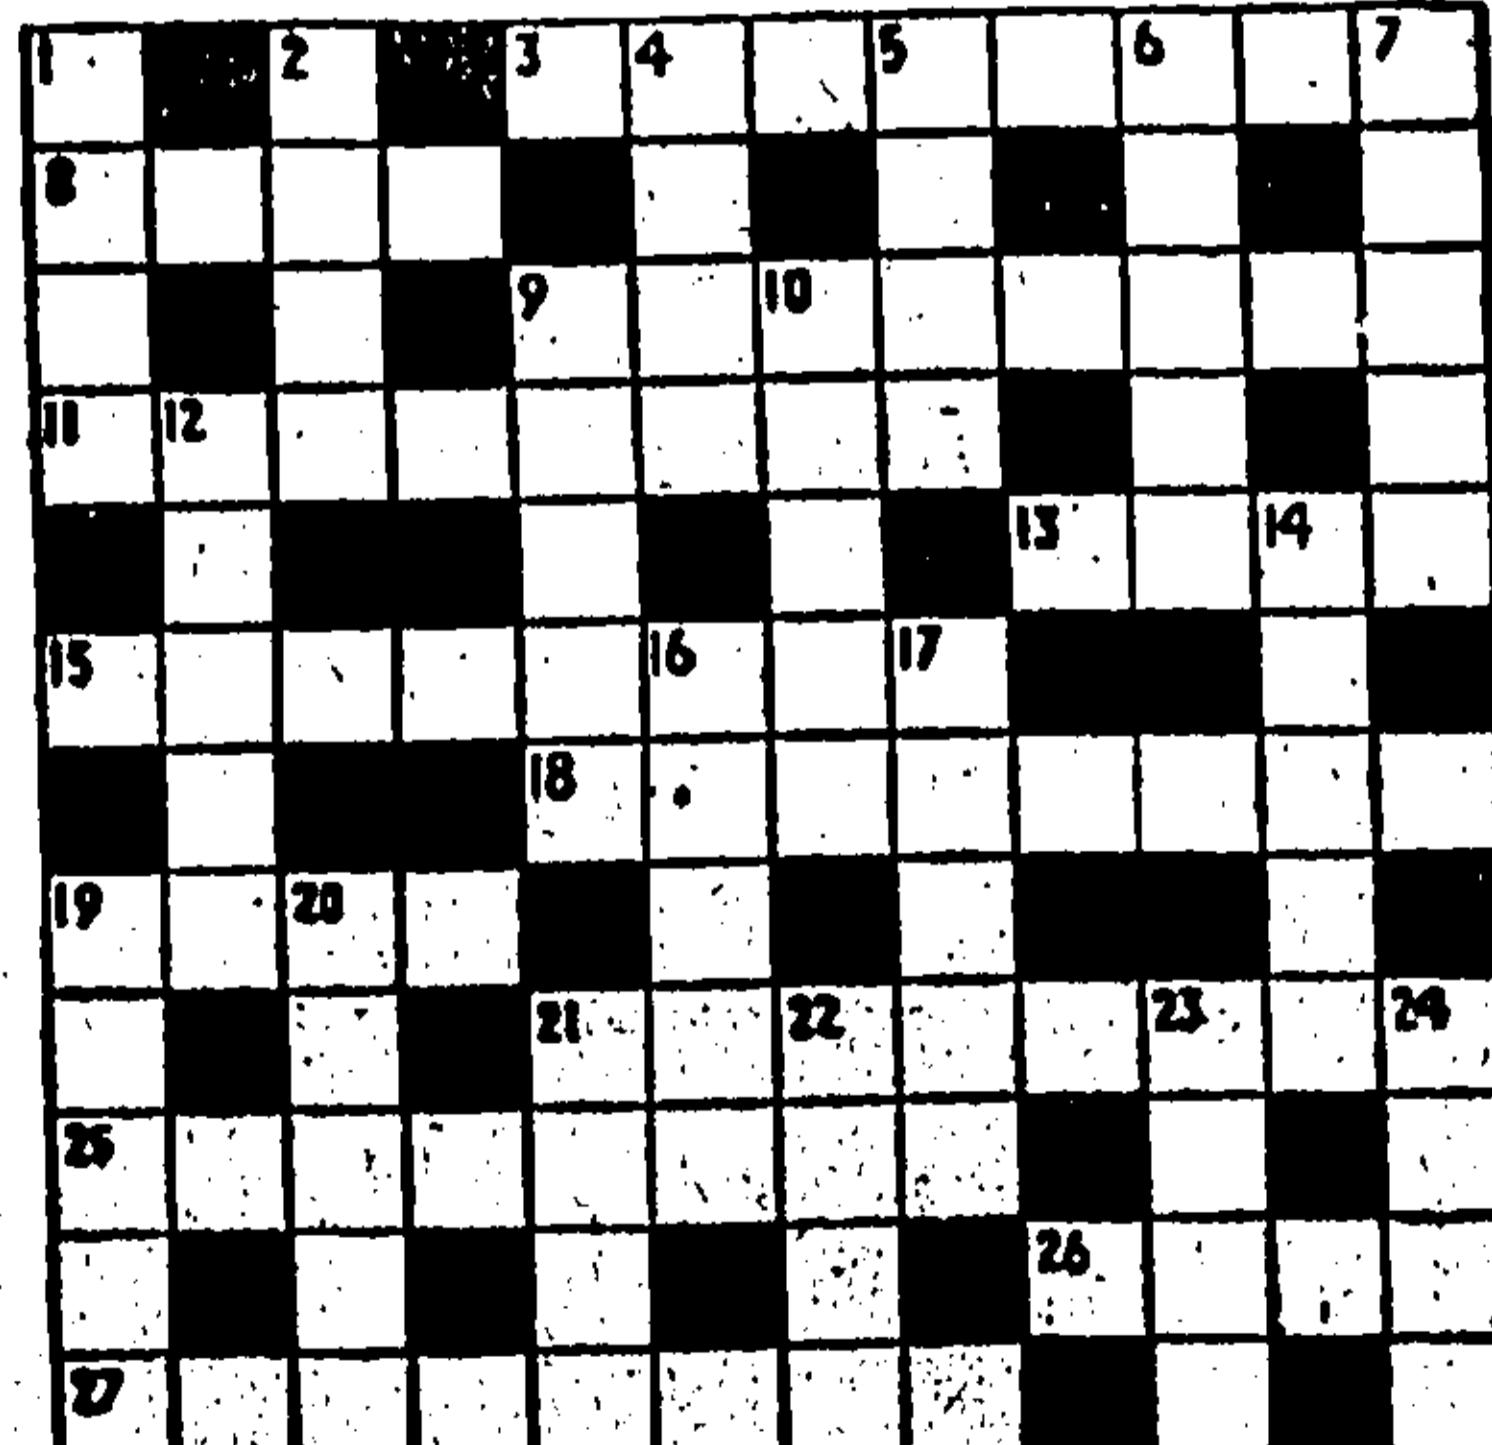

There would be a permanent exhibition of Commonwealth trade developments. Letting of shop, offices and showroom would make the centre self-supporting.

Marilyn Wants Uncontested Hearing

Santa Monica, Calif., Oct. 18.—Marilyn Monroe's lawyer today petitioned for an uncontested hearing of her divorce suit against Joe DiMaggio, former baseball player.

Mr. DiMaggio came here last Friday, the last day on which he could have filed a contest to the blonde actress' suit, but he took no action. Hearing on the divorce is expected within two months.

Miss Monroe, who has had housing problems since moving out of the cottage she and Mr. DiMaggio rented, solved them temporarily today. She moved into a dressing room on the 20th Century Fox Studio lot until she finds an apartment.

CHURCHILL'S BIRTHDAY

Truman And Baruch Invited To Head U.S. Contribution

London, Oct. 18.

Ex-President Harry Truman and Mr. Bernard Baruch, America's elder statesman, have been invited to head the United States Contribution to the Sir Winston Churchill 80th Birthday Fund.

Lord Moynihan, former Chairman of Britain's tiny Liberal Party — and Treasurer of the Appeal — announced this here today.

The Prime Minister will be 80 on November 30.

The Fund was set up about a fortnight ago. Money is already rolling in and Lord Moynihan instanced a cheque for $10 (about £3, 10s.) from America.

"MILLION SHILLINGS"

It came from Elizabeth B. Corbin of New Haven, Conn., who sent the money to a village in Buckinghamshire where a 75-year-old retired company director had spontaneously started a Churchill "million shilling" campaign.

This campaign and all the other birthday appeals which in the past few months have sprung up throughout the country have now been merged with the international campaign.

Arrangements are being made with the Commonwealth High Commissioners for handling the Birthday Fund in the Commonwealth countries.

Outside of the United States, however, no other foreign country has been approached though Lord Moynihan stressed that the Prime Minister had admirers all over the world who will want to contribute.

The Prime Minister has promised his opinion to any suggestions as to the form the presentation should take place.

One had been made for an international mobile rescue squad to assist people in times of disaster, Lord Moynihan said, "the kind of thing which would appeal to Sir Winston's mind."

Another was home for old people.

A list of names of contributors will also be given to the Prime Minister.

The Fund became a national project after two white school teachers, Claudio and Mary Epps, from the small cathedral town of Chichester, wrote a letter to the London Times asking if a nation-wide scheme could be set going to which men and women in all walks of life and of all shades of political opinion could contribute in sums however small."

"NOW OUR LIBERTY"

Now posters all over Chichester read "when Britain stood alone Mr. Churchill gave us courage. We all, young and old, owe him our liberty."

This was agreed. The Committee will meet again on Wednesday.

Patrons of the Fund include the Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, Sir Thomas Beecham, the conductor, Mr. Anthony Eden, the Foreign Secretary, actor Sir Laurence Olivier, and Mr. Clement Attlee, Labour Party leader.—Reuter.

Mau Mau Victim Still Missing

Nairobi, Oct. 18.—An African cook employed by Mr. Arundell Gray Leakey, elderly British farmer, abducted by Mau Mau terrorists last Wednesday, has been found slashed to death in the densest Chiloe Forest, which adjoins the Leakey farm-house.

The police said today that 1,000 Africans led by 50 Europeans, lined up shoulder to shoulder and hacked their way through the forest yesterday. They found the cook's body beside that of another African who had been strangled.

But there is still no evidence of Mr. Leakey's fate.

Mr. Leakey, a "blood brother" of the Kikuyu tribe, refused to take the Mau Mau seriously. He has been missing since Wednesday when his wife and houseboy were murdered in his farmhouse.—China Mail Special.

South Africa's Racial Problem

New York, Oct. 18.

A new proposal for the appointment of a mediator to bring the Governments of South Africa, India and Pakistan together to help settle the problem of the "treatment of people of Indian origin in the Union of South Africa" led to a two-day adjournment today of the 80th session of the Political Committee of the Assembly.

The proposal was made by Senior Jose Miguel Ribas de Cunha, one of the three members of the Good Offices Commission.

REQUIRE TIME

India said this would require time and consultation among members of the Committee and suggested that the Committee adjourn for at least 48 hours.

This was agreed. The Committee will meet again on Wednesday.

In its report to the special Political Committee, the Commission regretted that it had failed in its formal and informal approaches. It said the South African Government was "uncooperative."—Reuter.

A GIRL IS HAPPY— and adventure pays off

MONTAGUE LACEY sailed in the liner Saxonia with 300 Britons seeking a new life for themselves in the new, young world of Canada. Today he reports back on how some of the "Saxoniens" he got to know are shaping up to the challenge that emigration represents.

Montreal.
Her name is Hazel—Hazel Hurn, and she is 23; and life has suddenly opened up for her as a new emigrant to Canada in a way she had hardly dared hope for back home in the Lancashire town of Warrington.

She was a nurse in Lancashire. She is a nurse in Canada—at Toronto's Orthopaedic Hospital.

Her new hospital and home are in pleasant surroundings where there is no smoke pollution, and colour is already starting to tinge her pale Lancashire cheeks.

"The hours of work are better, and I am getting £55 a month compared with the £30 that I got in England," she said.

"I'm a bit amazed at the prices of things, but the only thing to do is to forget about pounds, shillings, and pence."

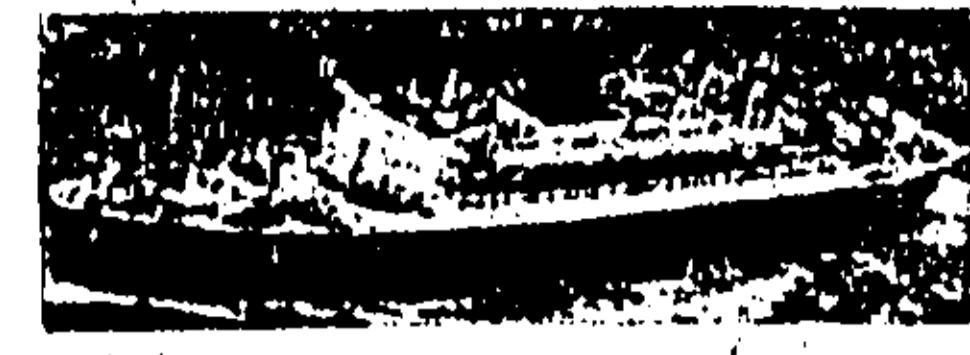

"I don't feel a bit lonely—I have another friend out here, and the Canadians soon make you feel welcome."

Hard Work

Does she miss anything in Canada? Yes, of course—her mother and brother back home. Now she has a true emigrant's ambition—to work hard and earn enough money to pay either for a trip home or for her mother to visit her.

Hard work—that is the thing Canada expects, and gets.

That should suit Harry—sorry, no surname, at his request—a 28-year-old North Londoner.

He was going up country—to try to find a job as an electrician—when I met him. We talked over a meal in a chain restaurant.

Emigrant Harry looked about him with more than usual interest—at the comfortable leather-covered dining chairs, at the clean tablecloths laid for each new customer, at the "hostesses" (Canadian for waitresses) in their pale blue and white uniforms, nylon stockings and white shoes.

Fed Up

He explained his interest. It was the strike of electrical workers, at Lyons in London that decided him to leave England.

"I could not stand all the trade union restrictions any more," said Harry. "I could not work overtime and I was fed up with the blokes who didn't want to work at all. I worked for the British Electricity Authority and when the strike was on we were told not to go and eat in certain tea shops. I always did and I pulled faces at the shop stewards when they came round to check up.

"I'm a skilled tradesman and I do not think it will be difficult to get work in Canada, and when I get on my feet my wife will come out."

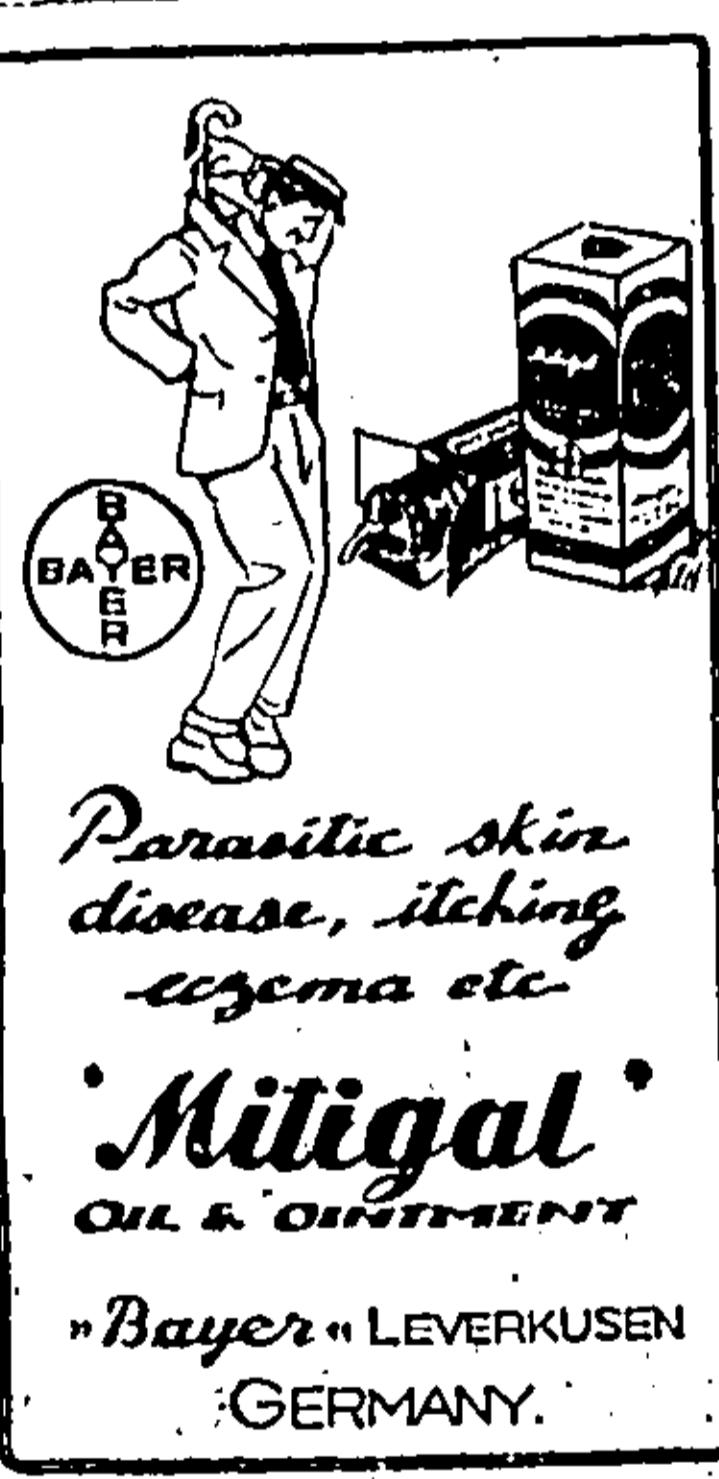

As a first-rate electrician Harry can earn £8. to £14 an hour in Canada. He will work mainly a 48-hour week. There will be no free medical treatment and he will have difficulty in finding a house. But hard work pays its dividends in Canada. The butcher and baker here can earn £15 to £20 a week, and a bricklayer can get £14. to £17. an hour. I met one garage hand who drives to work in a big American car.

Lucky Couple

There is an increasing demand for agricultural workers and a lucky couple are the Smiths—Mr and Mrs Tom Smith, of Honiton, Devon.

They are to work for Mr. C. Taylor, a former Minister of Agriculture for New Brunswick who wanted someone to manage his farm while he is away on political work. The Smiths will be paid £40 a month and they will live in the farmhouse where everything is found for them.

Mr Smith will look after the herd of 80 registered Ayrshires with the help of two hired men and Mrs Smith will look after the house and cook for the boss.

DRAWING BY GORDON HOGG

THE STORY SO FAR

COMMUNISTS are after a secret paper scientist Gerald Cockburn has brought from America. Endi, his sister, and George Lanning, in love with her, are helping to outwit them.

After rescuing Endi from the gang's headquarters in Chelsea, Lanning frees Gerald, who is badly injured, and goes to find help, only to be detained by a policeman in connection with a murder in Gerald's Richmond flat.

Gave a push

Why should he yield up his liberty to this elderly, lumbering constable? He might be kept for hours at the station, he might even be charged with murder.

And scarcely had the thought crossed his mind when he gave the policeman a sharp push outwards into the roadway.

He saw the man lurch, totter and heard him fall, but by that time he was half-way across the street, making for a passage that opened on the other side. Surprised faces were turned towards him; he heard a shout or two, and footsteps coming after him; but nothing concerted, no hue and cry. The passage led into another street, less frequented and much darker; he doubled down it, took one turning after another, and then slacked off into a running walk. Presently he stopped, and as he did so another sound, that was not another sound, that was another sound, stopped, too.

He started off again at full speed, trying not to listen for the other footsteps.

At last he espied a deep doorway, almost a porch, and plunged into it, pressing his back against the projecting wall.

"I should say there would be no difficulty," said the policeman.

"They'll let me telephone, won't they?"

"If the reasons are held to be sufficient," said the policeman ponderously, "yes. Under supervision, of course."

"The thing is," said Lanning with a rush of confidence, "I've got a... a material witness. She's at the Sloane Court Hotel. She's a master of fact."

"I should say there would be no difficulty," said the policeman.

So that was all right, too. With a deepening sense of security Lanning walked along beside the policeman. He had seldom in his life felt the need of protection, but now he remembered something that punctured his serenity completely.

"I saw you get away from him, but you won't get away from me. I have your description, too, and I must ask you to accompany me to the station."

Lanning could see little of the man except that he was wearing ordinary clothes.

"Who are you?" he gasped, still breathless.

"A policeman. Here's my warrant." He took a card out and flashed his torch on it.

"All right," said Lanning for the second time. "I'll come."

He fell into step beside the policeman.

The fight was out of him now; he didn't think of running away. Instead, he felt enormously relieved.

From the first he had wanted he had promised to take to hospital.

He wondered what his position as a suspect was. Would they charge him at the police station, or would they just interrogate him?

Before, only Endi's danger had been real to him, now he began to think of his own. In any case the removal of the nervous strain, all the physical efforts he had made during the day were out of his sight until it reached their destination.

There was only one thing to do; he must take the man into his confidence. He had already done so to some extent. Was it wise? The policeman hadn't cautioned him, which was encouraging; they only cautioned one after a charge had been made.

"Officer," he said.

"Yes?" said the policeman.

"It was a rough house," he said briefly, "and they beat him up. I got away."

"They would have beaten you up, too," the policeman said.

"Yes, if I'd let them," Lanning thought with some complicity on the precious trio he had temporarily laid out, and wondered what sort of shape they were in now.

"Could you identify them?" the policeman asked. Again Lanning hesitated, but why not tell him? He had nothing to be ashamed of in the part he had played.

"There was a big, square-faced chap and a slim-built, willowy article in green cords, and a chin-faced little thing called Cora. She was the worst of the bunch."

"I believe I know them," said the policeman, "I believe I know them," he repeated. "A nasty number!"

"I ought by rights to take you up to the station," he added, meditatively, "but if I went in now I might nab the lot." He looked hard at Lanning. "What do you say? It's the citizen's duty to help the police."

"I'm quite ready," Lanning said.

He did not have to remind himself that he had been here before; but this time it was the policeman who knocked and rang. He knocked several times; the sound filled the street and beat inside Lanning's tired head like a physical pain. But no footsteps approached the door.

"Seems they're all dead," the policeman remarked. "Let's try the bell." Lanning was impressed by his coolness, but then he did not know what it was like inside.

The summons on the bell remained unanswered.

Cora and Radek

Lanning and the policeman exchanged glances; and Lanning wondered if he should tell him of the mule through the house next door. But try as he would to get back his old energy he couldn't, and was content to leave the initiative to his ally.

"Let's see if this will fetch them," said the policeman suddenly.

He stooped down, and raising the flap of the letter-box with his finger, whistled three times through it. They both drew back, and the policeman said,

"If they open the door, follow me straight in, and stop when I stop."

As he spoke a gleam of light appeared through the slit of the letter-box, and footsteps were heard coming to the door.

It opened a crack. The policeman did not wait but pushed it and plunged in, with Lanning hard at his heels. Under the hall light the policeman stopped.

"This is Number Eight all right," he said. "But where's your man?"

"Where indeed? There was no sign of Gerald."

Lanning's thoughts whirled. Had he crawled away? But how could he with his injured knee? Had some passerby picked him up? Perhaps, but in this street

YOUR BIRTHDAY By STELLA

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 19,

BORN today, you have a strong, forceful personality. You are not an easy individual for others to understand, but you have a strong will and, seemingly aloof at times, even show an autocratic tendency. Yet, underneath, you are warm-hearted, artistic and give time and effort to your company, sociably. You have a great deal of personal magnetism which attracts people to you, yet you are rather reticent about revealing what it comes to making close friends. You can even appear gruff and unfriendly, too. If a man, you may consider an unwanted intimacy on the part of someone who is practically a stranger. You are definitely reprobate although you can always find plenty to criticize in others.

Shrewd in business affairs, you are likely to make a fortune during your lifetime. You enjoy travel and will want to visit most of the far

C SUET Esq. has evolved a scheme for the overhauling of regional and local milk production.

His idea is to operate a partial devolution of local control by appointing milk regulation officials in sub-areas to work in harmony with the area milk supervisory committees, the testing officers, the milk regulation authorities, the council liaison officers, and the public relations officers of the regional bacteriological boards. This would do away with the supervisory selection committees, substituting for them, in each local milk area, a team of county council and borough council supply officials, a committee of estimates, a regional milk board, a laboratory council, an assistant deputy milk advisory committee, and two or more officials of a testing appeal body, working with the local commissioners associations, and the distribution boards.

An immortal reply

men are sometimes enticed from one band to another by glittering promises ought to be investigated more thoroughly.

When Sir Gerald Barry, the flautist of the Porthcawl Band, came with his colleagues to the Brunswick Square Festival, he was offered every inducement to forget loyalty, and to bring his flute to the Mordleham Band.

He was promised a special uniform, with spurs, and a free pass for the Mordleham Picture House. According to Mrs Reever's "Porthcawl Memories," Sir Gerald replied, "If my flute were the last flute in Europe, I would not sell it by asking it to associate with a so-called band which plays 'Tosti's Goodbye' as a march." These proud words may be seen today in the Porthcawl Conservatoire, beneath the actual flute with which Sir Gerald won (outright) the Schnopf Medal at Salzburg in 1934 for his superb rendering of "Pirl-pirl-pirl."

• JACOBY ON BRIDGE

Take Advantage Of Your Mistakes

By OSWALD JACOBY

ALL bridge players make mistakes. Good players merely make fewer mistakes than bad players do. It's important to remember, however, that a really fine player will criticise himself severely for a mistake that most people wouldn't even notice.

I'm reminded of a "mistake" made in last year's Summer National Championships in America. In that hand, shown above, Harry Barkay led the four of spades from the West hand. Dummy's king won the first trick, and declarer next led a low diamond from dummy and finessed the eight from his own hand.

Harkay won with the jack of diamonds and considered his next play carefully. His partner had signalled only mild encouragement on the spade trick, so it seemed unlikely that the defence could defeat the contract by continuing spades.

Since declarer seemed ready to cash a large number of tricks in the red suits, it was vital for the defenders to find the setting tricks at once.

After some thought, Harkay decided that the defence was hopeless unless his partner had

Autumn Treats For Guests

Refreshing Drinks &amp; Snappy Cheese Ball

AUTUMN is the season for hospitality. To treat your guests, it's a nice idea to prepare something special to drink.

Pineapple Smash is a cooling drink which we have found very popular.

To make it, boil 2 c. water and 1 c. sugar 10 min. Remove from stove and add a No. 2 tin crushed pineapple, 6 tbsp. lemon juice and 4 tsp. lime juice. To each c. of this mixture add 1 c. ice water, then freeze in cubes in refrigerator tray. Makes about 20 cubes.

For serving add 2 cubes to each glass, fill with chilled ginger ale and garnish with lemon slices and a spray of mint.

MINT REFRESHER

For another delicious drink with a mint flavour, combine and let stand for several hours, 2 c. hot tea, 1 bunch crushed mint, 6 tbsp. lemon juice, 1 c. orange juice, 1 c. sugar and 3 whole cloves.

The attractive example shown here is in hand-blocked silk, patterned with natural muted colours.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Before using iodine on a cut, be sure that it has not been so long that it has thickened. Stale iodine is likely to burn the skin.

East won with the king of clubs and correctly decided that his partner held both black aces. The question was, "Which black jack did West hold?"

After considerable thought, East returned a spade. This limited the defenders to four tricks. They could take one spade, one diamond and two clubs, but then declarer was bound to get the rest.

Harkay, one of America's finest players, bluffed himself not for foreseeing the difficult guess that his partner would have. He could have relieved this guess by cashing the ace of spades before leading the nine of clubs.

This would make it perfectly clear to East that a spade return was not wanted. East would have won with the king of clubs and would have returned a club, thus leading to the defeat of the contract.

FIGHTING TONIGHT

Dui Dower, the young Welsh wizard, unbeaten so far in his professional fights, has the hardest task of his career tonight at Harringay when he meets the Empire flyweight holder, Jake Tuli, in a Championship bout.—Central Press Photo.

My Money Is On Tuli's Punch Against Dower's Speed

Says DENNIS HART

On my left, a small, innocent-looking altar boy; on my right, an equally small, cherubic young Welshman. But put them in the ring and stand by for fireworks.

Promoter Jack Solomons has done just that. At Harringay tonight, the altar boy, better known as Jake Tuli, pint-sized Zulu holder of the Empire flyweight title, clashes with the Welsh cherub, Dui Dower, Britain's top flyweight.

On the scales, Tuli and Dower equal one good-sized heavyweight. In the ring they can be rolled on to provide more action than half a dozen big beef-trusters.

Tonight's fracas, in which Tuli defends his title, has caused more speculation than any fight for some time, and certainly more than any flyweight bout since Jimmy Wilde's days.

STAND OUT

For, in a boxing world sadly lacking in colour, Tuli and Dower stand out as personalities. Dower, who can talk as fast as he can throw punches; who starts for work at the coal face at five in the morning so that he can have his afternoons free to train; whose prize money so far has gone in buying his parents a public house and a car.

To Welshmen, Dui is more than a boxer, he is a public institution. Today a special train will pull out of the Rhondda, packed with Dower supporters. On the front of the engine will be a huge nine-foot leek, presented by a local councillor.

On its way to Harringay, the "Dower special" will stop at several stations in the valley to pick up more fans.

A convoy of buses and coaches will also make the long journey to London.

But coal production will not suffer. To make the trip the miners are working earlier and longer. To save time they are taking Sunday suits to the pit. Coal hewing finished, they will go straight to the pit-head baths, wash, change, then it's off to the London Road.

For they are going to see "their Dui" fighting for them.

And Tuli? His colourful too—in a different way. He doesn't talk much. In fact he is modest to the extreme. A religious young man, twice a week he serves mass in a local church. His first boxing lesson came from a missionary.

OF THE BEST

But, what's more important to Harringay's spectators, besides the colour, Morris, Tuli and Dower are boxers of the highest order.

Who is going to win? Having seen them in training it's hard to see how either can lose.

Training form, of course, can be deceptive. But watching Dower work out in the gymnasium over his parent's pub, there is no denying his footwork. His speed and his stamina. And after timing him, added to his punching.

But over the last year in London's Old Town Street, that's where I have seen Dower condition his broad frame to stand up to almost anything. I've seen him

"WE WOULD GO AGAIN" THE ARSENAL VISIT TO MOSCOW HAS DONE NOTHING BUT GOOD

Says TOM WHITTAKER

(Manager of Arsenal)

Get this straight: the Arsenal visit to Moscow has done nothing but good. I know all sorts of things have been said and written about whether it was a wise decision to send our team to play the Dynamos.

But I believe I can sum up my attitude by saying that, given more time for travelling, we would go again. I cannot emphasise enough the amount of goodwill this trip has created between the two countries, and, after all, surely this is far more important than the score.

We at Highbury accepted this invitation as a goodwill gesture, and I am sure the Russians did the same. We regard the honour conferred on us to play in Russia as a wonderful chapter in our history, and our thanks must go to the Football Association, who made this possible.

Although many people think we made a mistake in going, I feel there has been a contribution added on behalf of British football which has been appreciated by the Russians.

Whatever the score might have been, I am sure the real value of this trip will be found in the future.

The possibility of more matches was discussed during our visit and I would not be surprised if we have opened the way to more friendly exchanges between the two countries.

Everywhere we went in Russia we were given a great reception, and I know we have left behind a good impression.

Personally I learned a lot from this visit—some things which I feel could also benefit the game here, and I am giving some of their ideas much thought.

TERIFFIC TEAM SPIRIT

But perhaps the thing which impressed me most was the terrific team spirit shown by the Dynamos. This enabled both forwards and defenders always to be at the aid of each other, whether in defence or attack.

The understanding between all players was remarkable. I remember pointing out to one of our reserves, who was sitting next to me, how, when we attacked, every Dynamo player immediately fell back into his own half—at one time I counted twenty-one players in the Russians' own half!

Equally impressive was their discipline on the field, which, of course, helped them in their understanding. For often it was

Tom Whittaker

Effects of the long journey began to tell as the game worn on. It was nobody's fault that we were delayed by weather en route from Warsaw to Minsk, where mist grounded the aircraft.

This did mean, however, another night of disturbed rest and I feel, given more time to settle down before the match, we would have given a better display.

I regard this type of match like a cup-tie which calls for special training, but obviously in the circumstances this was not possible.

The Russians also appeared to share this view, because they understood our difficulties. In fact their press saw the game as it was played and treated us very fairly.

They regarded our visit as a wonderful gesture and many officials to whom I spoke looked upon this visit as from "old friends."

It was for me because it enabled me to renew my acquaintances with the Dynamo's team manager and others I met when they visited us in 1945.

Their season is nowhere as long as ours—they play from April to October, although all their players do another job as well.

EXTRA FITNESS

This other work is in conjunction with their football and they can devote all the time necessary to train properly.

This extra fitness and their discipline on the field enables them to conserve their energy more for when called upon to make one of their speedy recoveries.

They were also very clean in their play and there was never anything unfair.

They have longer ceremonies before the match than we do, and instead of the usual couple of minutes' net practice, that

No Upsets In Hard Court Tournament

No startling upsets featured yesterday's Colony Hardcourt Championship matches played at Chinese Recreation Club at Tai Hang, and only one match, that between youthful Francis Ma and S. T. Wu, went to three sets.

Colony Champion Ip Khoon-hung conceded only one game in eliminating Wong Nai-hun, whilst K. C. Das had things very much his own way against Ip Po-hay. Saubolle of L.R.C. also had an easy time, relaxing in the second set after winning the first six-love.

The best of this afternoon's matches in the Doubles should be the tie between F. M. Ribeiro and T. E. Rodrigues of Recreio and L. C. Kotewall and George Chou. Both pairs combine power tennis and counterfeet and the result should be a fine struggle.

The following were yesterday's results:

Men's double—Au Kam-moon and Wai Siu-kei v. Yuen Chak-kim and Shiu Yam-chu 62-61.

Men's singles—K. C. Das beat F. T. Wu 6-1, 6-1; Francis Ma beat F. T. Wu 6-2, 6-1; Choy Tin-kin beat Ip Po-hay 6-2, 6-2; Ip Po-hay beat Y. C. King 6-0, 6-1; Koon-hung beat Wong Nai-hun 6-1.

FIXTURES

Fixtures for today and tomorrow are as follows:

Men's doubles—F.M. Ribeiro and T.E. Rodrigues v. L.C. Kotewall and George Chou; Choy Tin-kin and Tsui Kai-ping v. Ip Po-hay; Ip Po-hay and K. C. Das v. Ip Khoon-hung.

Men's singles—Wai Siu-kei v. Au Kam-moon v. C. Braun; Edwin Tsui v. H.C. Wong; Francis Ma v. Choy Tin-kin; F. T. Wu v. Ho Cheung-po; F. M. Ribeiro v. T.T. Wang; L.T. Lee v. A. Augusto.

Let's Pretend!

By HENRY LONGHURST

"Unless journalists took the gloves off to each other sometimes," wrote that late and great golfing figure John Low, many years ago, "the public would not get value for money."

With this commendable motive in mind and claiming as ever to represent the intelligent minority, I take off my gloves and, while congratulating him on leading the English team to victory at Portstewart, challenge Leonard Crawley.

I also thought the spectators were marvellous. They gave us a very good reception. During the first half there was a certain amount of tension, but they were always very sporting.

After the match, when the players were due to leave in their coaches, crowds gathered outside to give them a tremendous send-off.

It was the same cordial atmosphere throughout—even when we departed in the early hours of the morning—the first plane left at three and the other at five.

During my stay I was able to finalise the arrangements for the forthcoming visit of the Spartak who play at Highbury on November 8, and I hope that they will leave this country with the same pleasant memories I have of our mission to Moscow.

TIME-BOMB IN FLEET STREET*The Press To Blame For England's Soccer Decline?

By ERIC NICHOLLS

Who is to blame for England's soccer downfall? Ever since that day last November when Hungary trounced England at Wembley Stadium, players, officials, clubs, fans and press have been working overtime pointing accusing fingers at each other.

The sporting press had the biggest say. They named the "Guilty Men." They stated, bluntly, exactly what was wrong with English football and how it should be put right. Now those same soccer scribes have been made the target of a frontal attack in a book just published in London.

Ralph L. Finn, sports journalist and author, has written his account of the World Cup series in Switzerland. But "World Cup" (World Cup, Panther Books, 2s) is more than a mere description of that eye-opening and form-busting tournament.

TIME-BOMB

The author has carefully selected a large time-bomb, planted it in the centre of Fleet Street, and then sat back to watch as the national soccer critics wondered what had hit them.

Surprise Selections For British Walker Cup Team

St. Andrew's, Scotland, Oct. 18. The recall of 44-year-old Irishman, Cecil Ewing, and the selection of Scottish golfer Robin Cater were the main surprises in the British team announced tonight to meet the United States at St. Andrew's in the Walker Cup amateur golf international next May.

Ewing had practically retired from championship golf, but returned to his old form this season, and was runner-up in the Irish Open Amateur Championship.

Cater had a good season in only once by Britain—at St. Andrew's in 1938. The British team is: David Blair and Robin Cater (Scotland), Cecil Ewing and Joe Carr (Ireland), John Llewellyn Morgan (Wales), Gerald McKlein, Ian Caldwell, Ronnie White, Ernest Millward and Philip Scrutton (England). The non-playing Captain is Alex Hill (England), a former Walker Cup player. The match will be played on May 20 and 21—China Mail Special.

As well as retaining regulars, Ronnie White, Joe Carr, Gerald McKlein and John Llewellyn Morgan, the selectors have recalled Ian Caldwell who played in 1951 and introduced Philip Scrutton, who scored a brilliant win in the Brabazon Trophy tournament this year.

The team is completed by the inclusion of Ernest Millward, who was English amateur champion in 1952.

The Walker Cup tournament, instituted in 1920, has been won

Malayan Chinese Lose In Saigon

Saigon, Oct. 17.

The Combined Saigon Police-AJS team yesterday defeated the visiting Malayan Chinese team by four goals to one. The match was played in heavy downpour of rain, but attracted several thousand spectators nevertheless.

This advice for Marilyn Monroe comes from her old friend and co-star Jane ("Outlaw") Russell, herself happily married for eleven years. She gave her story to John Gay in Paris, where she is shooting "Gentlemen Marry Brunettes."

How To Be Happy — Though Wed.

By JANE RUSSELL

I was terribly shocked and upset when I heard about Marilyn Monroe's marriage breaking up. I know just how much this marriage that was going to be for keeps meant to her—and just how much she must be feeling now. Because I had exactly the same problems.

My husband, Bob Watersfield, is an ex-footsballer, and, like Joe DiMaggio, he hates parties and all the fuss that is bound to go on round a film star. He's a big man and everybody runs like mad. A girl needs someone like that around in Hollywood.

That's what Joe ought to do for Marilyn. He's got pretty much the same outlook as Bob, but I guess he finds it hard to understand. Anyone not in the business is bound to find it difficult.

As far as Joe is concerned Marilyn is his wife, and he agrees if he doesn't like the way she dresses or the way she waggles her hips in public she'd better do something about it.

Mercantile Bank Chairman Here

The Chairman of the Mercantile Bank of India, Ltd., Sir Kenneth W. Meating, accompanied by Lady Meating, arrived from Tokyo by PAA plane this morning in the course of a Far East tour.

Sir Kenneth said the purpose of the trip was to meet important people and visit the Bank's branches. In the course of his 10-day tour in Japan, he met important bankers, industrialists and Government officials.

He said the economic situation in Japan was difficult at present, but that there were hopes that it could be solved with the co-operation of other countries.

In Shanghai, he went on, the Mercantile Bank office was still open, but was not functioning. There were still two British bank officials there, and it was hoped they would be able to leave within a few months.

Sir Kenneth said he believed this was the first time that the Chairman of a British bank had visited its branches in the Far East.

After spending five days here, Sir Kenneth will visit Bangkok, Penang, Singapore and Burma.

At the airport to meet the visitors was Mr. A. G. Donn, Hongkong Manager of the Mercantile Bank.

Indigo Paste Fraud: Man Gets Two Years' Hard Labour

Pang Luk-chak, alias Pang Teng-kwok, found guilty of conspiracy and applying a false trade description was sentenced to two years' hard labour by Judge A. D. Scholes in the Victoria District Court this morning.

Accused was alleged by the prosecution to be the brains behind a commercial fraud in which drums containing, for the most part earth and stones and about one per cent indigo paste, were sold as Indigo 20 per cent Paste, Tiger Brand.

Mr. J. C. McRobert, Crown Counsel, appeared for the prosecution, assisted by Det. Insp. H. C. Hui.

Mr. Y. H. Chan or Messrs Lau Chan and Ko, represented accused.

In a plea of mitigation, Mr. Chan said the accused first came to Hongkong from Hankow with his family in 1949. He is married and has five children, their ages ranging from eight to 19 years.

ADVANCED MONEY

Mr. Chan said that accused's father won arrived here in 1948 as the agent of the Mitsui bishi in its representation in Hongkong.

Accused and his father were in partnership with the complainant (Sze Chu-chai) for two years. Apart from the partnership accused had from time to time advanced money to assist the complainant, Mr. Chan said.

They have done business together and this is the first slip in the long association," Counsel pleaded. He asked the Judge to regard the incident as a momentary slip on the part of the Full Court this morning.

The Full Court ordered that execution of orders made by the Court below, in respect to the assignment and possession of the property in question (1 Oaklands Path), be stayed pending the making of such orders thereon as Her Majesty in Council may see fit.

They further ordered that there should be no stay of execution in respect to the same profits assessed by the Registrar of the Court at the total sum of $139,017.50 in respect of the periods commencing February 1, 1946, and ending on February 28, 1954, and of execution in respect to the same profits for the period from March 1, 1954, to July 1, 1954, assessed by the Registrar of the Court at the rate of $2,125 per month.

The appellants were the unsuccessful parties in an action for possession of 1 Oaklands Path brought by Li Tam Tolling, wife of Mr. Li Koon-chun, prominent local merchant. She was the plaintiff in the original action which involved the alleged sale of the school premises during the Japanese occupation of Hongkong.

OLD AND VERY SICK

Counsel said that accused's father did not give evidence because he did not think the prosecution would dispute the fact that he was an old man and obviously a very sick man too.

Mr. Chan said that accused was arrested towards the end of April and was detained for two months before he was able to raise bail. The accused had to face a long trial which itself, Counsel submitted, caused considerable mental anguish and suffering to the accused.

Passing sentence of two years' hard labour, Judge Scholes said that Counsel for the Full Court was entitled to take into consideration that it was not dealing with a man of a confirmed criminal type, but was dealing with some one who had been driven by circumstances to seek refuge in Hongkong.
